HISTORY

An-Ki is a poetic journey where the puppet and object theatre format is hybridized with the sensorial theatre, within an enveloping space, the Ortiga tent. The live music, the lighting, the scenographic proposal, create an immersive and intimate experience.

The public enters the tent in groups of 3, a character receives them and guides them to a circular space. Once the 24 people have entered the show begins.

A thread of black sand falls from a starry sky, a voice explains creation, the beginning of everything, hands collect the sand, a tree grows, then a forest, a town. A girl, Adja, who returns home, but suddenly distant footsteps are heard, a giant enters and takes the forest.

3 characters appear, each one takes a group, and 3 paths begin, 3 stories to explore, experience, learn about and live. Each group, at different times, will go through a miniature town transformed into a giant, they will walk inside the subconscious of the protagonists to understand their secrets, illusions and fears, they will enter the forest to listen to the voice of the trees. Small experiences, which nourished by the viewer's imagination, will build the puzzle of AN-KI; They will put their senses and intuition to the test, participating in the events of the story.

The poetics of the game opens the imagination and curiosity of each spectator, who will live a unique experience, to reflect from intimacy, on the environmental and social situation that we live.

A work for all audiences, which will make our imagination fly and question what is the footprint we leave on earth.
